A POLITICAL SATIRE. DEMOCRACY. An American Novel. [Leisure House Series.] 16mo. pp. 374. Henry Holt & Co.

This book has undergone an experience not unlike that of some gentlemen and ladies, who enjoy a aderation at home by reason of the consideration they are supposed to enjoy abroad. On its first ore attention in its native country than a multitude of other clever novels and it seemed destined for speedy obscurity; but it happened to find its way to London, and there it made a reputation of New-York. It is not surprising that it should be admired in England. There is a certain fine workmanship, a polished style, a brightness and finish, of which Englishmen have learned to look for own; and it may be that when they find this high literary quality over here they are the more pleased because it seems to them so odd that we should produce it. The style of "Democracy" is not to be measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of the measured by the standard of W. D. Howells or of Henry James, jr., but it is greatly superior to that enough to keep the interest of the reader always of the ordinary novel-maker, and it is distinguished | awake. by an ease and smartness in which English fiction is apt to be especially deficient. But its chief attraction across the Atlantic was the piquancy of its subject. It describes a state of society in which our English friends take a curious interest. They have sent scores of young gentlemen with note-books, to look at it, and to write a chapter about it after they have treated of Ningara Falls, the wheat country, San Francisco, New-York hotels, and the Mormons; but none of these amiable tourists go home with a very clear idea what Democracy is like. Here, however, is a writer who eems to have got at the heart of the subject; at least who presents the picture of social and political lite at the American capital for which the Old World has long been looking .- a mob of coarse, ignorant, smart and dishonest people, with only the British Minister moving among them as a superior person.

We may say at the start that the picture is most artfully drawn. There have been countless attempts to write novels of Washington life, but this is the only one, we believe, that can be called suc-cessful. Its construction is simple and strong. Though there is no plot there is a story, and it moves on steadily, so that the satirical sketches instead of obstructing the narrative, Mrs. Lightfoot Lee, a rich, young, fashiona ble and intelligent LXXXV. Part EIGHTY-FIVE. LXXXV. widow, having exhausted New-York and Europe, decided to pass the winter in Washington, and it is with what she saw there and what befell her that *Democracy" has to do. It will strike the reader as a peculiarity of the book that everything is described as it would have appeared to Mrs. Lee. The low ambition of politicians, the baseness of great party leaders, the bad manners of Congressmen, the vulgarity of social entertainments, are presented just as a clever and refined woman would have seen them. Either unconsciously or by a fine artifice, the author looks at the whole scene with the eyes of the herome. What sort of a spectacle it was may be understood from the following dialogue on corruption, in which the principal speakers are an eminent Illinois Senator and the raffish old Bulgarian Minister:

an eminent Illinois Senator and the raffish old Bulgarian Minister:

| "My reply," said Ratelifie, "is that no representative Government can long be much better or much worse than the society it represents. Purify seciety and you purify the Government. But try to purify the Government artificially and you only aggravate failure."

| "A very statesmanlike reply," said Baron Jacobi, with a formal bow, but his tone had a shade of mockery. Carrington, who had listened with a darkening lace, suddenly turned to the Baron and asked him what conclusion he drew from the reply.

| "Ab" exclaimed the Baron, with his wickedest leer, "what for is my conclusion good? You Americans believe yourselves to be excepted from the operation of general laws. You care not for experience. I have lived seventy-five years, and all that time in the midst of corruption. I am corrupt anyself, only I do have courage to proclaim it, and you others have it not. Rome, Paris, Vienna, Petersburg, London, all are corrupt; only Washington is pure! Well, I declare to you that in all my experience I have found no society which has had elements of corruption like the United States. The children in the streets are corrupt, and know how to cheat one. The cities are all corrupt, and also the towns and the judges. Everywhere men betray trusts both public and private, steal money, run away with public funds. Only in the Senate very well declare that your great linited States, which is the head of the civilized world, can never learn anything from the example. I do much regret that I have not yet one hundred years to live. If I could then come back to this city! I should find myself very content—much more than now I am always content—much more than now I am head of the civilized world, can prepare that I have not yet one hundred years to the old man with life and gesture, "the United States will then he new I am always content where there is much corruption, and ma parole d'honneur!" broke out the old man with fire and gesture, "the United states will then be more corrupt than Rome under Caligula; more corrupt than the Charch under Leo X.; more corrupt than France under the Regent!"

This appears to be substantially the opinion of the author of "Democracy." Nothing could be more hideous or more hopeiess than the whole aspect of American life presented in these brilliant but bitter pages. The principal male figure is Senator Ratcliffe, "the highpriest of American politics," and Mrs. Lee is saved from marrying him by the timely discovery that he has accepted a bribe for reporting a subsidy bill. Ratcliffe explains and defends his conduct in this affair, as well as in a transaction involving the falsification of election returns, by arguments which have a familiar sound. But the portrait of this typical politician is not the only the collection. The Hoosier President and his dreadful wife, the civil service reformer who aspires "to act the part of the educated gentleman in politics," and the distinguished man of letters from treated with imparcial ridicule and contempt. The humor of the sketches is often irresistible; the satire cuts deep; if the pictures are caricatures they have at least enough resemblance to nature to merely grotesque libels. Perhaps no one man that we know of unites all the odious features of Ratcliffe, or of French, or of Gore, but all their faults and follies are typical of classes which we know too well. In a word, the book contains enough truth to be a wholesome rebuke; and also it contains enough falsehood to be a cruel libel. The wrong of such a work lies of course in the assumption that there is no public career higher than the base scramble which it chocses to describe, no patriotism purer than that of the statesmen whom it selects for satire, no earnest and honorable life into whose secrets it has not penetrated. There are Ratcliffes; but we all know they are rarely the men who in the

There is probably much conjecture as to the originals of the characters in "Democracy." Doubtless all these fictitious politicians are co pounded of odds and ends, features borrowed from many models; and to identify them with any real personages would be both absurd and unjust.

RECENT FICTION. The new story by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, entitled "The Marquis of Carabas" (Roberts Brothers), is a romance of a daring and highly colored description, in which nature and probability are purposely put aside for the sake of thrilling in-cident and picturesque scenery. The class of fiction to which it belongs, though not a high one, is legitimate, and Mrs. Spefford has produced a specimen which will do no discredit to her luxuriant imagination and dramatic ingenuity. The conception of the reformed old slaver, gnarding his secret from the adopted son upon whom he lavishes his wealth and his affection, and persecuted by a villanous companion of his evil days, recalls the central idea of "Great Expectations," but the resemblance is probably accidental, and the mode of treatment is & Co.) should turn upon a device very similar to that of "The Marquis of Carabas." Here it is with a majestic and tremendous Roman brigand that we have to deal instead of a retired sea-captain; but in our own day, the tale is melodramatic enough to CAYUGA LAKE MILITARY ACADEMY, $250. —At Mt. Hope Ladies' Sem., Music and Lake Military Programs. See Sem., Music and Lake Military Programs.

It is inferior to the previously mentioned book in literary merit, but certainly does not yield to it in the abundance of incident. The heroine is captured by benditti, not once only, but again; there are lively scenes in the robbers' cave; there are spies and conspirators in every chapter, monks, artists, models, venal monsigneri, corrupt police, convents, murder, rescue, confession and a great secret; and readers who are not afraid of excitepublication, a year or more ago, it attracted no ment in the hot weather are advised to spend a summer afternoon in observing how ingeniously the author makes use of these effective materials. -" Prince Hal, or the Romance of a Rich Young Man," by Fanny Andrews (J. B. Lippincott & Co.), which regained for it a place on the book counters is chiefly interesting as an illustration of Southern society during the last years of the slave system, written with a strong sympathy for the Southern character, and a keen appreciation of the attractive aspects of plantation life, yet with some sense of the better examples in American fiction than in their rottenness of the whole fabric too. The author's purpose is not to teach a lesson, however, but mere-

Bodie, Cal., July 27.—The suit of Page against Summers, for four-aiths of the Kentuck mine, Patterson District, Sweetwater Meunciains, was decided yesterday by Judge Wiggin in favor of the defendant.

Bullion valued at $86,000 was received in this city yesterday from the mines.

Bullion valued at $86,000 was received in this city yesterday from the naines.

The closing quotations of Lake Valley stocks yesterday, as reported by Watson & Gibson, were: Grande, $6a$64: Plata, $54a$554; Bella, $215a$214; Apache, $160a$170.

Old Dominion Copper superintendent telegraphed, July 26: "Product yesterday, 16,000 pounds copper. Shipped 318 bars to-day, weight 105,024 pounds copper."

A report recently made by P. Amiraux, M. E., of San Francisco, on the Perkins mine, the property of the Advance M. & M. Co., shows that the mine is situated in Cherokee Mining District, Butte County, Cal., about thirteen miles from Oroville, and only 800 feet from the west branch of the Feather River, which carries water sufficient to run forty stamps the year round. The ciaim is 1,500 feet in length by 600 feet in width. A tunnel has been run 160 feet with a view of taoping the ledge at a depth of 150 feet, and a shaft 40 feet deep exposes a vein of decomposed quartz 6 to 8 feet wide carrying free gold. Working tests of the ore show results of $13 to $30 per ton. The cropping can be traced the whole length of the claim. With a mill erected 400 or 500 feet from the mine and run by water power, the cost of mining and milling, it is estimated, would not exceed $2 per ton. CONDITIONED candidates privately coached tor fall examinations during summer months at Tarry town-on-Rudson. Address A. ARMAGNAC, Principalitying faultule. Fall term begins September 1.3. CLOSING PRICES PHILADELPHIA STOCKS Reported by Fort L. Davis & 23. 17 PM.

At the opening of business this morning the storespeculation hesitated and prices generally decline from last evening's closing figures. Lake Shore and Contral of New-Jersey stocks were eagerly pre-11434 to 11334 and from 8158 to 8014 during the first fifteen minutes after transactions began. Prices for the general list, however, did not yield more than an average of 12 per cent. From the early declines the recovery, at first, was slow but steady, in a market that may be quoted as dull Later on, however, when it was discovered that stocks were being absorbed, the movements became more rapid, and before the end a genuine buoyancy was the prevailing feature of an active market. Lake Shore sold up to 1163s, Michigan Central to 100%. Central and Hudsen to 136%, St. Paul 16
121, Northwest to 137%, Dubuque and Sioux City to 94 from 91%. Delaware, Lackawannia and Western to 138%. Central Pacific to 96%. Louisville and Nashville 16 75 Central of New-Jersey to 824, Missouri Pacific to 1064, Texas and Pacific to 545, Richmond and Danville to 116, and Richmond and West Point
